ment he lured Lena Westner to his home and swindled her out of her life savings, $340, by promising to marry her. Miss Westner is one of twenty-four women he robbed. For this crime he was sentenced to four years and nice.

Then he took a false oath in connection with the case, and was indicted for perjury, of which crime he pleaded guilty. For this offence he was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment. District Attorney Backus advised the Court not to show any mercy to the defendant, who, he said, was one of the vilest swindlers he had ever heard of.

"I understand the case thoroughly," said Judge Aspinali, "and make it known that perjurers, habitual criminals and swindlers of the control of the contro

A pawn ticket found on his person gave a clew to his identity. Both the police and the hospital officials assert that he was not a victim of foul play. On account of his intemperate habits his family were compelled to leave him. Coming home on Saturday night he found that his wife and daughters had gone to live at No. 348 East Seventy-fourth street.

After visiting several saloons it is beleived he went to sleep in the Park, and that in the morning a blood vessel burst and the man staggered on to the place.
